Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Tuesday 06 Apr 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Cold and windy with sunny spells and wintry showers.

Today:
Sunny spells, but also further showers of sleet, snow and hail, these most frequent near coasts exposed to the north-westerly winds, with some developing inland by afternoon. Severe gales and a spell of sleet and snow for Shetland this afternoon.

Tonight:
Clear periods and a fairly widespread frost, but some wintry showers in the north and west. Remaining very windy in the far north and near some North Sea coasts.

Wednesday:
Wintry showers becoming more isolated with more in the way of sunny spells, then cloudier far west with some rain into the north-west into the evening.

Outlook for Thursday to Saturday:
Patchy rain moving east across the north Thursday. Elsewhere dry, bright and cold. A band of rain moving south through Friday, turning colder behind with hail and snow showers following.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.